«New York» Thanks W.L.G. for the return of $100 which was not needed for the Liberator. Says that he is not receiving the Liberator regularly. Was glad to hear of the founding of the New England Anti-Slavery Society. The Nat Turner rebellion "has paralyzed our Philadelphia friends, and nothing ... can be done there now, towards organizing a National Society". No money can be raised for the negro college. The free negroes may be persecuted "to make them disposed to emigrate." Fears "the vengeance of Heaven" for the people's sinful conduct toward the Indians and the negroes.

.Anti-Slavery Office, New York. Thinks it would be better to support schools which admit negro students than to undertake to build the new Manual Labor School. Beriah Green has been trying "to make the Oneida Institute the focus of light to the minds of 'colored Americans'." E. W. favors using A-S funds for scholarships for colored students at the Oneida Institute. Regrets that C. Stuart did not pay the English donation to the N.E. Anti-Slavery Society. The American Anti-Slavery Society voted to buy 500 copies of Mrs. L. M. Child's Appeal. The colonizationists have tried to silence James Temple, who has just come from Botany Bay.

.New York. Thinks that G. Thompson's discussion of the subject of Slavery has made a good impression here. Tells of a conversation G. T. had with a Southerner. "We are residing at Brooklyn, L.I. at the house of Mr. Ibbotson, an English friend of Thompson's, who entertains us in great style ..." Compares his sumptuous fare to the plain diet recommended by Sylvester Graham. Was invited to an Anti-Slavery meeting at the church of Rev. D. C. Lansing by Lewis Tappan. Dr. Cox spoke and Joshua Leavitt read a letter from J. G. Birney. Arthur Tappan "regrets the course he pursued in regard to" the American Union for the [illegible]lief ... of the Colored Race. He has given the American [illegible]Slavery Society $1000 this month. "Theodore D. Weld [illegible]abouring indefatigably in Ohio".

«New York» Tells about a trip to Philadelphia. "Our Party consisted of Garrison, Thompson, Ibbotson, Cambell, and Dr. Cox." Had an argument with some Colonizationists. Comments on the people he met: Mr. & Mrs. James Mott, James Forten, Robert Purvis, Joshua Coffin, Edwin P. Atlee, Thomas Shipley, Sutcliff, Arnold Buffum and «Sarah M.?» Grimké. Says that the Quakers are too pharasaical. There was a panic during a lecture by G. Thompson, caused by fear that the church galleries would fall. Thompson later addressed a colored audience. To the Female Anti-Slavery Society of Boston

[New York] The New York Society favors the formation of a national Executive Committee. Attacks the politicians in Washington. Believes that the Abolitionists should consecrate their children to the cause. A national society should arouse the women of the country from their present indifference and lethargic attitude. In a postscript to Mrs. [Maria W.] Chapman, Mrs. A. A. Cox tells the cost of some work done for the Anti-Slavery Fair in Boston. Says there has been a real Anti-Slavery Jubilee in New York, which she calls the Convention of Lecturers. Says the Grimké sisters are "still our guests."

«New York» The writer condoles with the addressee in the loss of Ann Green Chapman, and expresses her religious faith which enables her to rejoice when she hears "that another blest spirit has been ... permitted to enter that new Jerusalem." The writer has felt as if the loss of "the valued & efficient labors of our sister" were a "demand upon us by Omnipotence himself to double our diligence." Exhorts the addressee to come to the approaching Convention, emphasizing religious consecration. The writer considers the holding of a national Convention a step of great importance, hopes for the presence of colored women from Boston, and tells of the plan to collect specimens of ar[illegible]c work from colored schools for exhibition. «New York» The Philadelphia Anti-Slavery Sewing Society wants to have some reticules stamped with a certain engraving in which a slave mother and child are represented. The writer wants to know if Nathaniel Southard promised a N.Y. engraver all the work of the New York Society. The writer and her associates have been working on petitions. "A few months will determine the success of our efforts." "There is so much aristocracy here, so much walking in Broadway to exhibit the butterfly fashions, that we seldom gain access to the consciences of the women." Complains of the ignorance and stupidity of the rich women of [illegible] York. Criticizes their schooling. The writer trusts in [illegible]nd hopes that, with His aid, the cause will prevail. «New York» The writer explains that his family resides in New Haven and that he spends a few days with them twice a month. Believes that the ladies are circulating petitions at New Haven, where a society was formed last winter. Names ladies who would be happy to receive communications from the addressee. There are few female societies in the state (Connecticut). Refers the addressee to Amos Augustus Phelps for information. The writer, when in New Haven, will try to "get the address of your society into the Religious Intelligencer." Trusts that "the ladies will be more efficient than the gentlemen have been in Connecticut."

.Anti-Slavery Office, New York. The writer doesn't think the addressee should take the defection of James Trask Woodbury and Charles Fitch so seriously. Doesn't think that Garrison and Amos A. Phelps should have put so much effort into attacking the Clerical Appeal. "It was the production of weak men acting in the character of cat's-paws." Thinks the Liberator partly to blame for "the weak brethren." Intends to attack the clergy as long as any of them defend slavery. Thought there were personal motives mixed into the strife over the Appeal. Didn't think Garrison could have been injured. "To be plain, if Garrison is i[illegible]ed from any quarter, I fear it will be from his best frie[illegible]nd himself." Garrison didn't have to answer James Trask [illegible]dbury's letter. Disapproves of Garrison's letter.

«New York» A reply to W.L.G.'s letter dated Sept.13th. The writer does not approve of the Clerical Appeal, but criticises some of the material in the Liberator relating to it. Thinks that the Liberator devoted too much space to attacking its authors. Does not consider the Appeal a serious menace. The Liberator's attack indicated dissension among the Mass. Abolitionists. Disapproves of attacking any Abolitionist. Discusses "the remarks in the Philanthropist of 15 Sept." Approved of them in general. Warns of a rift between the Garrisonian Abolitionists and those who agree with the Clerical Appeal.

«New York» The quarterly magazine to be published by the American Anti-Slavery Society "will require a very vigorous effort" to get it going. Can see faults in his friends, which accounts for the criticism in a previous letter. Begs W.L.G. "to let other subjects alone till slavery is finished". Points out that the Declaration of Sentiments conflicts with W.L.G.'s idea that human government has no rightful authority, since the Declaration says that the freed slave should be put under the "protection of law." E. W. fears that W.L.G. will be sucked into "a vortex of Spiritual Quixotism" by his Peace doctrines. Disagrees with W.L.G.'s doctrine of "perfect holiness." Says [illegible] Gospel truth does not wholly free a man from sin. Ca[illegible] L.G.'s theological position
